Q: What is the smallest number of boxes that a set of four boxes has to contain? You are given a set of four boxes. Each box is of the same size. How many boxes does the set of boxes have to contain to contain in each box exactly one of the four colors, blue, red, green, and yellow? This is my attempt: I assume I can create three boxes with each a given color. Then I can then create the last box. As long as this box has the given color then the boxes that were already constructed contain that box. Otherwise they can be disregarded. This means that I can create boxes that contain each color twice, which means I can create boxes with the four colors in them. A: Assuming no unique boxes, you can just consider the number of boxes of each color to be independent:

blue	4	1, 1, 1, 1
red	4	1, 1, 1, 1
green	4	1, 1, 1, 1
yellow	4	1, 1, 1, 1
total	16

4, 4, 4, 4 So we have a possibility of $16$, and $4*4*4*4$ is a factor of $16$, thus this is the smallest number of boxes you can do this with, and the minimum number of boxes by any method is $16$. If you want only unique boxes, you can first form four boxes that contain only yellow, and then for each green box place two blue boxes inside, one on top and one below. This will produce a box with 12 boxes total, six of which are yellow boxes and six of which are green boxes. A: There is a book on the shelf at home called $41, where H.S. Morson argues that the smallest boxes in which all four colors can be found is not $41$ but $41
